Did You Know?

Our Summer Reading Program starts in June!

It will look a little different than years past as participants will be able to easily track reading, either online or using the app, with our new portal Beanstack. For those who prefer paper logs, they will be offered on our website and throughout the community.

Visit your library’s website for more details on the Summer Reading Program, prizes, and other exciting programs.

Nonfiction

Caterpillar and Bean
by Martin Jenkins
The fourth book in the First Science Storybook series gently shares facts about lifecycles with young readers. Complete with concepts to think about, an index of topics, and follow-up questions, this text is valuable to both teachers and budding scientists.

The Important Thing About Margaret Wise Brown
by Mac Barnett
A beautiful tribute to the visionary author of Goodnight Moon and The Runaway Bunny. And also, an outstanding biography of an unconventional woman who changed the world of books for children.

Moth: An Evolution Story
by Isabel Thomas
Strikingly illustrated, this book on evolution takes the reader on the journey of natural selection through adaptions to various environmental factors. An amazing informational book for the young reader on the impacts of pollution and how animals respond to those changes.

Chapter

Beverly, Right Here
by Kate DiCamillo
Despite her tough act, Beverly grieves for the loss of everyone that has up and left her. She vows to take control of her own life, move to a new town, and not be dependent on anyone ever again. But Beverly can’t help caring for the quirky characters that have snuck into her heart in her new community.

The Remarkable Journey of Coyote Sunrise
by Dan Gemeinhart
Coyote and her father have lived in a school bus for two years when she learns that she must finally return to her home. A wonderful mix of adventure, humor, and family issues.

Guts
by Raina Telgemeier
It all starts with a flu bug. Now Raina is anxious about her tummy troubles and other changes around her. Support from her family and friends helps Raina realize that everyone is afraid of something! Another graphic novel winner from Raina Telgemeier!
