Nonfiction

The More You Give by Marcy Campbell An adorable story about love and how it grows. Charming illustrations accompany a multi-generational message about the best gifts being ones we cannot hold in our hands.

Inspired by both nature and community, this book is truly awe-inspiring!

Rock? Plant? Animal? by Etta Kaner

Calling all nature detectives! After rocks, plants, and animals are explained, readers are asked to guess which one of 14 examples appears on an illustrated page. Turn the page for the answer and discover interesting facts about it. Also a gentle reminder about not judging something by its appearance.

Shark Cam by Margie Palatini

A humorous and amiable take on the perspective of a shark, where the righthand pages show the shark's view, and the ocean animals don't react as one would think. Appealing to emerging readers who are learning sight words. Part of the new Critter-Cam series.

This Is Not My Home by Eugenia Yoh and Vivienne Change

A unique title that beautifully captures a move to another country. The illustrations are resplendent in revealing the emotions of the characters, as well as the dichotomy of blending, and embracing, two different worlds.

Glitter Everywhere: Where It Came From, Where It's Found, and Where It's Going by Chris Barton

Glitter is shiny, colorful, messy, and fun. But how is it made? Who invented it? And what should we do with it when we're done? A fascinating nonfiction picture book about the sparkly stuff.

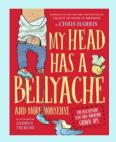

The Eyes and the Impossible by Dave Eggers

A dog named Johannes runs faster than light. Johannes, adventurous and fearless, has been the Eyes of the Bison alerting them to all the happenings in their beloved sanctuary but now change is afoot. How will he save all that he holds dear?

Big by Vashti Harrison

An important book about self-love, belonging, and the labels others give us. A child is fat-shamed and made to feel less than, yet she knows how to love herself and recognizes the bias and judgments of others for what they are — theirs, not hers. Impressive!

My Head Has A Bellyache by Chris Harris

From the author of the hilarious poetry book, I'm Just No Good at Rhyming, comes a second book as witty and punny as the first. Harris proves to be the Shel Silverstein of this generation! A hilarious and notable read aloud or read alone.

Simon Sort Of Says by Erin Bow

Both haunting and hilarious, this skillfully written novel deals with the trauma of a school shooting and a subsequent family move. Embodying the vulnerability necessary to heal and the beauty of letting others in, this title is heart-wrenching in all of the right ways. Outstanding!
